

Knocking from inside

Spent many days under this sun Wondering if you are the one, that pulled me closer to Some kind of love, away from fear
Some kind of way to see clear

I didn't understand, that we don't need, to walk that path, or live our lives like that now, in search of reason and control

We're knocking on that same old door, no matter what we're searching for,
we're knocking from the inside

Oh it ain't worth the tears we cry, no point in waiting for the tide,
we're knocking from the inside

If you're ever lost in a rational haze Wondering if that is the way, you can always escape From secular boredom and orthodox hate
And it will never be too late

So take my hand, we don't need, to walk that path,
or live our lives like that now, In search of reason and control

We're knocking on that same old door, no matter what we're searching for,
we're knocking from the inside

Oh it ain't worth the tears we cry, no point in waiting for the tide,
we're knocking from the inside
